SITE PLAN

The Phi Chapter is moving forward with one of the most exciting projects in its chapter history: the construction of a brand-new chapter house. The 5,000-square-foot home will feature seven bedrooms, house eleven brothers, and will serve as a space for brotherhood, leadership, and lifelong memories.

Sigma Tau Gamma

The goal is to raise $350,000 by December 2025 to break ground in 2026. Alumni from multiple generations have stepped forward, offering not only financial support but also professional expertise in architecture, real estate, and project management to bring this vision to life.

Alumnus Dwayne Judice described the meaning behind the effort:

"This project is about leaving a legacy. None of us have ever done anything like this before, but it's amazing to see brothers from every generation come together."

For the undergraduates, the project is just as exciting. Chapter President Lawson Hendry shared his perspective:

"When I first heard the house was finally going to happen, it was pure excitement—not just for me, but for the entire chapter. Alumni are flying in from across the country to support this project, and that shows the strength of our brotherhood."

The Phi Chapter House Project is more than a building, it's a testament to brotherhood across generations. With alumni and undergraduates united behind a shared vision, Phi Chapter continues to build a lasting legacy for future Noble Men. At Homecoming, October 17–18, undergraduate brothers and alumni will gather to celebrate, show support, and raise funds to bring the project closer to its goal. Sigma Tau Gamma is also providing opportunities for alumni to make tax-deductible contributions to the project through the Phi Library Fund.

LEADERSHIP THAT LASTS: INSPIRING STUDENT SUCCESS

Sigma Tau Gamma congratulates Dr. Joe Lizza, Monmouth '04, on his promotion to Senior Director of Student Centers & Campus Activities at Rowan University. In this new role, Dr. Lizza is responsible for shaping the administrative vision, leadership, and management of the Student Centers and Campus Activities, a comprehensive department supporting student life, programs, and services at Rowan University.

In his leadership position, Dr. Lizza looks forward to creating new ways for students to engage with campus life, from expanding spaces for connection to supporting student engagement and even the university's growing esports initiatives. "I really am looking forward to thinking about new opportunities to support student success and engagement in campus life."

A proud Sig Tau, Dr. Lizza reflected on how the fraternity shaped his approach to leadership. "I learned in the fraternity that you want to show up and be the best possible person you can be in all the work that you do. That brotherhood mentality of supporting others when you can, still guides how I lead today." When asked what advice he would share with undergraduates, Dr. Lizza encourages brothers to embrace every opportunity. "Take advantage of every interaction and networking event because you never know what conversation might impact your future."

Dr. Lizza's journey is a reminder of the lasting impact of Sig Tau's values, proving that the lessons learned in brotherhood continue to shape careers, relationships, and service to others long after graduation.

NATIONAL HAZING PREVENTION WEEK

SEPTEMBER 22-26, 2025

"Hazing is such a huge topic that comes up and is a huge part of why fraternity and sorority life in general has the huge stereotype it has. People join a fraternity to find a brotherhood and shouldn't have to be forced to do things that go against the policies of an organization. People lose their lives to being hazed. It causes more trouble than good...for everyone."

Tyler Kiley, Pitt-Johnstown

From September 22–26, Sigma Tau Gamma participated in National Hazing Prevention Week, an annual initiative dedicated to raising awareness, educating members, and promoting a safer, stronger brotherhood free from hazing.

Throughout the week, Sig Tau emphasized the importance of understanding what hazing is, how to recognize it, and the long-term impact it can have on individuals and organizations. This year's theme, "Be the Leader. Prevent Hazing.", reminded every brother that leadership means making choices that protect the well-being of others and ensuring that every member's experience is safe, inclusive, and aligned with our values. Hazing has no place in Sigma Tau Gamma or in the fraternal world. Our brotherhood is built around our six Principles, and striving to be noble gentlemen in every aspect of everyday life.

By choosing integrity and rejecting hazing in all forms, we affirm that Noble Men Don't Haze. To continue learning and leading in hazing prevention, members are encouraged to explore these resources:

- 👉 Hazing Prevention Network – hazingpreventionnetwork.org
- 👉 StopHazing – stophazing.org
- 👉 888-NOT-HAZE

Sigma Tau Gamma invites you to take a stand and make a pledge to prevent hazing. You can take the pledge by clicking here. Though National Hazing Prevention Week is this week, Sigma Tau Gamma Fraternity's commitment against hazing remains in place every day.

Be the Leader. Prevent Hazing.

NOBLE MEN DON'T HAZE

"I support a hazing-free brotherhood because it helps build trust and a closer bond with your brothers. I believe that real brotherhood comes from building each other up, not tearing each other down. A hazing-free environment allows everyone to feel safe, respected, and valued. By not allowing hazing, we create a culture of genuine support that lasts beyond our college years."

Justus Yates, William Woods

FROM THE ARCHIVES

This month, we're highlighting the history of the Sigma Chapter at the University of Central Arkansas. Originally founded as the Secret Society of the Owls in 1915, the group later became known as Kappa Phi Sigma, a local Greek organization. On November 30, 1934, they officially chartered as the Sigma Chapter of Sigma Tau Gamma with 37 Founding Fathers. Today, Sigma Chapter proudly holds the distinction of being the oldest existing Greek letter organization on the University of Central Arkansas campus.
